VOTING REFORM BACKED BY NIXON

WASHINGTON (WP) - President Nixon has decided to seek an overhaul of the electoral college system, rather than junking it in favor of direct, popular election of the chief executive, Republican congressional leaders said Wednesday.

The president, they said, will endorse alternative proposals-generally favored by political conservatives-that would divide each state's electoral vote according to the share of its popular vote or the number of its congressional districts won by each candidate.

House Republican leader Gerald R. Ford Jr. of Michigan said Mr. Nixon would seen send Congress a special message on electoral reform, but told newsmen the president did not tie himself down" on its details during a White House legislative conference on Wednesday.

FAVORED PLAN

Other sources said the president was likely to give his top rating to a proportional plan, which would mathematically allocate each state's electoral vote according to the share of its popular vote of each candidate. In a state with 20 electoral for example, in which the candidates split the popular vote 60 per cent to 40 per cent, the high man would get 12 electoral votes and his opponent eight votes.

An acceptable alternative to Mr. Nixon, the sources said, is the district plan, which would award one electoral vote to the high man in each congressional district and two votes to the high man in each state.

Conservatives in both parties tend to favor the proportional and district plans, because they preserve the small states' advantage in the allocation of electoral votes, while diminishing the power of minority blocs in the large urban states to switch big units of electoral votes with their

Forest Minister Ray Williston's gument is silenced now, since instatement this week that logs which can be cut into lumber should not go into pulp is both a measure of thrift and a realistic assessment of reap all it can through closer utilizaavailable supply.

British Columbia is not short of wood. On the other hand, most timber stands easily accessible to markets are now under controlled cut and if the return from that cut is to be increased, more parts of the tree will have to be used. By this means the principle of sustained yield will be maintained and a larger harvest from the same growth will be possible. Stumps will be cut closer to the ground and tops will be lopped off at a smaller diameter.

Senate Rebuttal to Kierans on NATO

THE prime minister's summons to demake our voices heard in the highest bate on Canadian policy towards political and military circles in the world NATO has provoked a gratifying response in the Senate. There has been in fact more said - and that more to the point - in the upper house than in the House of Commons. It is probable that the most arresting speech, from the ministerial standpoint, was that delivered on Thursday by Senator Dan Lang of South York. Sen.

Lang is a Liberal and accordingly had no partisan interest in embarrassing the government. He was a vocal member of the Canadian delegation to Brussels last November and was thus able to draw on factual up-to-date information derived from briefings and direct contacts with spokesmen of many European countries. Finally, his speech dealt not solely with the defence and foreign policy problem but also with the ministerial problem which has grown out of it.

Sen. Lang began with a reference to the careful preparation for the meeting of the North Atlantic assembly, noting particularly the co-operation extended by Mitchell Sharp and Leo Cadieux. This had enabled delegates to participate fully in the various sessions. "They were not diffident about putting forth their views, and there was no hesitancy in doing so, notwithstanding the equivocating posture of the Canadian government at the time, the so-called review of foreign policy being in progress."

Response to Czechoslovakia

After summarizing the conclusions of the conference, Sen. Lang dwelt on the NATO response to the Soviet aggression in Czechoslovakia. He noted the actual commitments entered into by various states. For example, Belgium undertaken to recruit "career volunteers," reviving an interrupted program which is to recruit 4,000 men a year. West Germany is retaining combat units that were to have been turned into training formations, and purchasing 88 Phantom reconnaissance aircraft; the 1969 defence budget is up by 740 million DM (roughly $185 million). The Italian defence budget has been increased seven per cent. The Norwegians are strengthening their northern defences. And so on.

The senator then commented on "some discordant notes" at home disturbing "this atmosphere of renewed dedication to the principles of collective

"I should say that if the press is to be believed (or, he might have added, the House of Commons Hansard), the prime, minister has encouraged the postmastergeneral to publicize his views on Canada's continued participation in NATO. I suggest that this makes a mockery of the notion of eabinet solidarity when the postmaster-general's views apparently are totally at variance with those held by the ministers responsible in this area, the minister of national defence and the secretary of state for external affairs."

Sen. Lang expressed some doubt about the precise meaning of the "national debate" but suggested that the proper forum for it was the halls of Parliament.

Preconceived Determination

He continued: "If I am correct in this regard, then I would be less than honest if I did not say that I am now suspicious that such activity must represent an attempt to rally public support behind someone's preconceived determination to remove Canada from the NATO alliance and, if necessary, to do so by bypassing Parliament in the process. I hope my suspicions are ill-founded."

Senator Lang then took up one by one the arguments advanced by Mr. Kierans in his speech at Nanaimo.

To assert, as does the postmastergeneral, that NATO is "not worthwhile" is to argue that collective security is not worthwhile. This is to ignore past experience. More especially, it is to gnore the fact that NATO accounts for about 18 per cent of our defence budget, or roughly $200 million.

"For that amount of money we can and we are listened to. We can help fashion the shape of events to come, completely out of proportion to our relative size as a country and our relative contribution to the alliance."

Sen. Lang observed in passing that the expenditure of the Swedes for noncollective security is, on a per capita basis, about five times the expenditure of Canadians.

Useless Bureaucracy

As Mr. Kierans sees things, NATO is a useless military bureaucracy which has divided Europe instead of unifying it, The senator agrees, adding that without NATO Europe "would be united as a group of military satellites under Russian military domination." Instead the continent has been divided into the slave and the free. "There is still a free West Germany, a free Belgium, a free Holland, a free Italy and, under de Gaulle, a relatively free France."

Is NATO a self-justifying deterrent against a non-military threat? Mr. Kierans must be persuaded that 400,000 armed foreigners in Czechoslovakia are simple tourists. In fact the Warsaw Pact countries and Russia are "undoubtedly the most heavily armed agglomeration of states in the world, whether in aircraft, armor, nuclear intermediate range missiles or manpower, and with a nonnuclear capability probably double that of the European NATO forces."

The senator scoffed at the notion that what we spend on NATO determines the scale of our foreign aid. This is non sequitur. "What we expend on foreign aid is no more dependent upon what we expend on NATO than upon what we spend on the Canada Pension Plan or the million for NATO "partly assures us that we are going to have countries, underdeveloped or developed, with which we can be concerned. They will at least be there and presumably we will be here to be concerned about them."

Mr. Kierans maintains that the existence of NATO guarantees the existence of the Warsaw Pact. Even if this were true, disbandment of NATO would not be helfpul. For the Russians, without the pact, could maintain their military hold over pact countries through existing bilateral agreements. Without NATO the alliance countries would lose their extensive political organization for consultation and co-operation in all fields. Moreover, if the Canadian and American forces had to withdraw, European countries would be separated by an ocean from their former associ-

Martin Evasive

The senator with most extensive experience of foreign affairs is Paul Martin, the immediate predecessor of Mr. Sharp. One would suppose that his intervention in the "national debate" would be of even greater value than that of the postmaster-general. Last week Mr. Martin was invited to say whether he supports the thesis or the antithesis in the present discussion.

Sen. Martin, formerly dean of the House of Commons and still a member of cabinet, has an even vaster experience of Parliament and a reputation for political prudence. "The hon, senator," he responded, "knows that I am not going to give him the reply that he wants."

Not after 33 years in Parliament, most of it in the councils of government.

Recognize Red China

Concerning the recent statements on foreign policy by members of the government, Voice of Women express hope that in future Canada's policies willbe determined in the light of her own interests, as expressed in public and parliamentary debate. Canada's experience and maturity should be sufficient to enable her to make decisions independent of the advice and interests of her friends and allies.

Voice of Women urge the immediate dent.

diplomatic recognition of the People's Republic of China as the legitimate of all China Both Peking and Formosa insist that China is one country. Therefore Canada should acknowledge that China is indivisible and that its government is in Peking.

Voice of Women agrees with Mr. Sharp that Canada should work for closer ties with South America. Through agencies of the United Nations Canada can participate as fully as she wishes in helping the people of Latin America with trade and aid agreements. Looking Back

From the Times,

Duncan - The Duncan Board of Trade was finally organized today. A meeting was held in the council chamber at the call of Andrew Peterson, who is the Cowichan delegate to the Vancouver -Island Development League. About 50 business men of the district were present and the meeting was very enthusiastic.

T. A. Wood was elected president, W. F. Jaynes, vicepresident, and A. Peterson, secretary.

Roadblock To Peking

By C. L. SULZBERGER from Paris

KIND of blind man's bluff is under Away between Communist China and the United States in an effort to improve their relationships. This tentative and uncertain process gives the willies to Moscow, which dislikes Peking as much as Peking dislikes it and which fears Chinese territorial claims along a lengthy, disputed frontier. China took the initiative in reopening

the recessed Warsaw talks with the U.S., now scheduled for Feb. 20, and is preparing to return all ambassadors recalled last year for "reeducation." Only Cairo has been steadily represented by a Chinese chief of Many American leaders want a new attitude vis-a-vis Peking and most of the NATO allies, furthermore, are starting to accommodate themselves to the idea of full diplomatic relations. But for Peking) Washington is the only capital that counts.

The Chinese want above all to insure that the two superpowers don't get together at China's expense. As Vietnam negotiations inch along, Peking appears to have concluded it must prepare for an active role in a peaceful Southeast Asia and at all costs avoid its neutralization under any formula backed up by Moscow and Washington and excluding Peking.

Therefore China now faintly hints at a less ideological and more national policy towards the West. The wide and jagged rift between Moscow and Peking involves equally intense ideological and national

Pacific Strategy

However, if Peking still insists as a precondition for even minimal coexistence with the U.S. that it must sacrifice Taiwan (Formosa), no serious improvement is imminent. Washington undoubtedly needs China's acceptance, if not endorsement, of a Vietnam peace; but it cannot modify the fundaments of its Pacific strategic position as quid pro

It should not be forgotten that the Chinese again mentioned settlement of the Taiwan issue as an essential precondition to coexistence. This idea now echoes in serious American quarters. Senator Fulbright wants American withdrawal of military aid and naval protection for Chiang Kai-Shek's island domain so the two Chinas can, as it were, settle their own argument.

But the implications of such talk must be pondered. Those who wished the U.S. to withdraw from the Asian mainland, starting with Vietnam, because America was a whale that could not fight on land against a Chinese elephant, now seem to want even the whale to retreat. The ultimate logic of this approach is a return to isolationism and fortress America.

American Pacific strategy is based on island positions extending from Japan through Okinawa, Taiwan and the Philippines down to Australia. Mainland garrisons in Korea and Vietnam developed almost by accident.

Since the offshore island crises of the mid-50's, the U.S. has built Taiwan into both a fortress and an Asian economic showcase. The U.S obligation to maintain Chiang may have been sufficiently fulfilled but one can scarcely argue that it should abandon the majority population of Taiwan, which is Formosan and dislikes all Chinese overlo

Philippine Position

The American ally, the Philippine Republic, strongly urges the U.S. to remain in Taiwan. Were it to fall to Peking. Manila would then consider the U.S. defence are broken and might well contemplate a new and less Americanbased policy. Likewise, the clamor to oust American bases from Japanese Okinawa is increasing.

It is notable that this is spearheaded by pro-Chinese Communists. Kamejiro Senaga, chairman of the People's party, in "Tricontinental," a pro-Peking quarterly, stresses the direct link between Okinawa and the U.S. commitments in Taiwan, Vietnam, the Philippines, Japan and Korea.

It is not accidental that Peking again encourges a new look at U.S. ties to Taiwan — in exchange for coexistence with Washington - while a pro-Chinese party soups up pressure to oust the U.S. from Okinawa, Some day, indeed, the U.S. is going to have to adjust its position on both islands. But care must be taken to avoid doing so too soon, while Vietnam peace remains in abeyance, and before both Japan and the Philippines have been included in other defence arrangements.

The risk otherwise is immense. Pressures to urge the U.S. off the Asian mainland have succeeded in making their impulse strongly felt. It would be particularly dangerous to have simultaneous pressures succeed in urging the U.S. out of island positions, thus exposing a weakened Philippines or Japan to blackmail threats from either

Russia or China.

How reliable is the sun's heat production? Does it vary enough to account for the ice ages and other catastrophic climate changes?

A solar "flare" is an eruption whose causes are still poorly understood, although such a flare can eject streams of high-energy particles, generating enough radiation to present a possible hazard to men walking in space or on the airless moon.

Our understanding of the sun and its effects has been hampered by the blanket of air covering the earth. Some of the emissions most closely related to solar activity, such as X-rays and the most intense ultraviolet, cannot penetrate to the earth's sur-

Bankers' Darling

All this has made Krieger a special darling of foreign investors, banks and lending agencies and has given Argentina vastly increased stature in the international financial community. Here at home, it has prompted the business military establishments which determine power to put aside earlier misgivings about Ongania and support the

As a result, the only criticism now comes from the legally suppressed old-line political parties, from retired military officers who were on the losing end of power struggles with Ongania, from intellectuals who dislike the regime's muscular anticommunism and its stockian scrutiny of public

Most of these groups are too divided and lacking in public support to pose any real threat to the regime. And the labor unions, which long held the balance of power in this country, have been beaten down in every test of strength against the government.

Labor Threatened

Since then, most prominent Argentine labor leaders have become openly collaborationist in an effort to save themselves from the government's chopping block. Grumbling and scattered calls for a general strike are still quite audible among the rank and file, but everyone is fully on met with further sanctions and widespread layoffs.

between edible and inedible species and over generations of time the system became more elaborate and complex as powers of observation or as the need arose to distinguish between and more different kinds of organisms.

Even by the time of Aristotle, in the fourth century before Christ, a crude system of classifying animals apparent presence or absence of blood.

Mammals, birds, amphibians and fishes were recognized as distinct groups "with blood"; the remainder, which we now call invertebrates. were "without blood" and were further divided into several very arbitrary and artificial groups.

Animal classification remained in this unhappy state for many centuries, in fact up until the Renaissance when interest in medicine was revived and the study of biology was further sparked by the invention of the

The first notable improvement made about this time was by Linnaeus who proposed calling all those invertebrates with jointed limbs "Insecta" and all the rest "Vermes" or worms.

During the following period, extending into the nineteenth century, a more than usual amount of careful anatomical study was made by a number of eminent biologists and there emerged the idea that all animals, from the lowest to the highest, could be arranged in a graduated linear series. At the same time a more satisfactory division of the invertebrates was arrived at whereby molluses, arthropods, starfishes, jellyfishes and prowere recognized groups distinct from Further progress in designing a satisfactory classifica-tion of the animal kingdom was blocked by the widely held idea that each species was a fixed unchanging unit. It was found impossible to fit animal groups into separate compartments and to arrange them in a progressive order.

Alternate schemes were proposed by a number of naturalists at this time but credit apparently goes to Lamarck, the outstanding French biologist of early nineteenth century, for suggesting a genealogical tree arrangement for the animal kingdom. He also believed that species were not "fixed" but were in fact evolving and he proposed a startling new theory based on variation andheredity. These ideas were strongly contested by thinkers of the time and the controversy perhaps stimulated men like Wallace and Darwin who came up with an alternate theory based on "natural selection" and "survival of the fittest." Darwin's publication of "Origin of Species" in 1859 created a tremendous intellectual stir and marks a turning point in natural history thought.

Even with this new outlook based upon the idea that living species have evolved simpler forms in a branching pattern, the problem of arranging plants and animals into a satisfactory classification has not been entirely solved. Great progress has been made; almost universal agreement has been reached regarding the true relationships of the major groups of flora and fauna but so long as there are individualists among biologists there will be differences of opinion regarding many of the minor groups.

Moreover many species, particularly small forms, remain to be discovered, described and properly classified. Undoubtedly these activities and their attendant problems in taxonomy will con-tinue to keep biologists busy

WINNIPEG (CP) — Ollseeds drew most of a light trade on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange and most prices moved in a narrow range.

Flax and rapeseed received a local and commission house operation with rapeseed drawing a little exporter interest in thin offers and light hedges.

Barley moved in a domestic shipper operation but oats and rye were practically lifeless.

Lakehead prices for class two, IWA and domestic wheat all were unchanged.

CHEMICAL SALESMEN

BETZ LABORATORIES, a leader in industrial water treatment and pollution control, has several openings in our West Canadian district for experienced Chemical Salesmen. Responsibilities will involve the sale of a complete line of water treatment chemicals for boiler, pulp and paper, cooling water application and follow-up technical service.

Individuals selected for these positions must have a proven record of accomplishment in chemical sales to industry. A chemical engineering or chemistry degree, while desirable, is not mandatory.

These positions offer an unusually attractive compensation plan, company car and comprehensive program of fringe benefits. Interested candidates are invited to write outlining details of education, experience and salary require-

Still in Dark On Hospital

DUNCAN — After four years of haggling with BCHIS, Cowichan District Hospital Board is "still in the dark" over whether a proposed extended care unit adjacent to the present hospital will be of concrete or frame construction.

Hospital administrator Ken Noton told the Cowichan Valley Regional Board Wednesday night that little progress has been made in getting plans for a concrete building ratified by BCHIS.

The government body has recommended a building made of wood because of a cutback in building funds to hospitals.

Mr. Noton and hospital board chairman Claude Green were on hand to whow the plans for the building to the regional board and to explain $9,000 in fees charged by the architects who drew up the plans. The regional hand to show the plans for the board has fallen heir to the debt.

CAMPBELL SOFTENS HOUSING CRITICISM

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said he has "softened" his major criticism of the Hellyer housing task force's report after an hour's meeting with Transport Minister Hellyer here Wednesday.

When the report was published last week, Mr. Campbell said massive opposition would greet its proposal that a special federal tax be imposed on speculative land sales.

Mr. Campbell said if any such tax was to be imposed, it could only be imposed by the

After meeting the federal minister, Mr. Campbell said he now understands the report was merely pointing out "the facts of life" as they relate to land speculation in Canada, making possible suggestions. It was not hard government policy.

LOFFMARK DEFENDS COAL DEAL

By JOHN SLINGER

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark told the house that Kaiser Coal Corporation's return on its coal-mining invest ment in the Kootenays will be only 6 per cent.

He was criticizing a statemen Tuesday by Dave Barrett (NDP-Coquitlam) that Crown corporation should de velop the Fernie coal deposite instead of a United States company using Canadian re sources and money to clear $69 million profit on the first of e series of coal exports to

Mr. Loffmark said the work ing men of B.C. should not be "deluded into thinking" the NDP would be able to get more money out of the coal than the Social Credit government.

"If they get any more money it will be out of the hides of the working men."

GRAIN TIE-UP WASTE

Turning to the grain-ship tie up at Vancouver, Mr. Loffmark said it proves the federal nent can waste more in four years than British Columbia can save in 16. He said 25 ships are standing idle in the port now, waiting prairie grain shipments.

There was an economic loss of $62,500 a day while each ship was in port, which works out to $26 million a year or $104 million in four years.

(The province's accumulated surplus account now stands at $141 million.)

The minister said that so far as Western Canada is con-cerned, it all added up to "one of the most serious policy deficiencies in the national government today."

'MYOPIC GROUP'

At issue are federally-cor trolled wheat production storage, transportation and ex-port, all being managed "by a myopic group" without under-standing of the West's economy and unable to assess its prob-

The health minister also introduced the house to "the biggest political boondoggle in Canada today."

It was the equalization payments being made to Prince Edward Island. The province's budget last year was $50 for a population of million. about 100,000, about the size of a small city. Two-thirds of this is paid by federal equalization payments, he said.

He said he could not imagine such a high budget being brought down in any municipality in Canada and pointed out while B.C. makes payments to the equalization fund it does not receive payments.

I had another secret that worried me more.

In the course of hut horseplay, some rat stomped my sheathed bayonet. I tried to pound blade and scabbard straight. Then, three men on a side, we strove without success to free the reluctant steel. For three weeks, I lived in terror that the order would to draw the blasted thing. Finally a platoon-mate on his way out of the army traded with me.

With logging-camp bunkhouses in my past, the lack of privacy didn't disturb me. More daunting to the spirit was the loneliness known by the man newly in uniform when he goes among civilians.

We marched, we learned, we drilled. Even though still unproved, we began to feel like soldiers. It startled me to realize how thoroughly homogenized we had become. I was healthy as a horse;

Valentine's Origins Remain a Mystery

By PENNY SAVER

In one week and one day it will be St. Valentine's Day. I tried to find a few good Valentine legends to introduce my column, but the good encyclopedia was admirably restrained on the subject. It told me that there were two St. Valentines who might actually be one person whose martyrdom was recounted twice, and that these St. Valentines had nothing at all to do with the custom of giving a card or gift to your sweetheart, I was then referred to the feast of Lupercane, an ancient Roman holiday that occurred in mid-February. On this subject the encyclopedist gave a few brief descriptions of fertility rites performed at this festival, then finished by saying that no particular god seemed to be honored at this ceremony. Not a word about Valentines, or why we give them on February 14.

However our present Valentine's Day customs began, I am all for them. I always like an excuse for my husband to remind me I'm his favorite girl. But like all modern "festivals" Valentine's is mainly for the young. Unless things have changed radically in the past few years, hundreds of school children will be preparing Valentines for their favorite classmates. A mother or two might even get ambitions and prepare an after-school Valentine's party for the youngsters wilht heart-shaped cakes, cookies and maybe even candies.

This year I saw some "color yourself" Valentines for youngsters. These come in a pack of 36 for 59 cents. A selection for little girls (all ready colored and just needing to be cut out and popped in an envelope) is 39 cents for 24, while a similar selection for boys gives 30 Valentines for the same price. A selection of 46 Valentines, ready-colored and just needing to be assembled is $1. This selection even includes a lovely card just for that favorite teacher,

No-Occasion Cards

Cards usually commemorate some occasion, but some cards are for no reason at all - except friendship. I saw some very unusual cards that for the most part fall into this category, and, as with all such "no purpose" cards, a brief message can make them serve any occasion that might arise. These cards are all 35 cents each, and are as big if not a shade bigger than the "contemporary" cards that have been raising chuckles for several years now. All use bright fluorescent colors and quite abstract designs. The messages display a humor best described as "zany." One I saw was definitely a birthday card, but another just showed the meeting of two shapeless "blobs," complete with beady eyes and one much larger than the other. When this card was opened a single word appeared - "Hi." Other cards dealt with the meeting of two fluorescent "blobs" (eye-less this time) on top of a hill. On one the punch line was "I'm with you, but where are we?" Another said on the front "You do something to me," while inside one ball had rolled the other down the Emergency repair kits should be prepared for any emergency. That is why I arm mine with invisible thread. Of course, this thread isn't really invisible, or I would never get my needle threaded, but once it is in the garment it might as well be. Made of nylon, it comes in two shades: Clear, for light-colored material and dark to blend with darker shades. A 150-yard spool is 39 cents. This thread is washable and drycleanable and can be used for both hand and machine sewing For machine sewing the tension must be slack or the thread snap. Because the thread is so hard to see I also keep self-threading needles in my kit. These have a special "topeye" shaped like a "V". The thread snaps through a special channel into the actual eye below, For 29 cents one can buy a package of 12 assorted needles.

Hair Styles Designed to Suit Clothes

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS As the trend to the "total look" in fashion moves steadily onward, clothes designers are showing an in-creasing awareness of the importance that hair styling plays in fashion.

Although a very few top names, such as Norman Norell and James Galanos, have always gone as far as having special makeups and hair styles done for each collection, the trend is now spreading to such other names as Bill Blass (Maurice Rentner), Chester Weinberg, Geoffrey Beene, Anthony Muto and Donald Brooks.

Weinberg and Muto recently agreed to make up a panel with hair stylist Monsieur Marc, under the auspices of Helene Curtis, to debate the trends in fashion and coiffures. Both fashion designers showed as much awareness of styles as did the coiffurist himself.

Weinberg, whose silhouette for spring is a carved curve, wanted hair close to the head and fairly sleek. Muto, whose clothes have a kind of gay, do-y o ur-own-thing atmosphere, liked curls, but softened down from the wild heads of last

784 FORT STREET

MONTREAL, February 6th — Just the other day I had reason to be thankful again that my BANK OF NOVA SCOTIA Scotlacard was in my handbag. While strelling past a side-street boutique, I suddenly spotted that elusive "basic" dress. While it was not too expensive, still it was more than the ready cash I had with me. Without question or delay, the owner readily cashed my cheque — thanks to my Scotlacard. No wonder I make sure wherever I go my Scotlacard goes too. Why not drop in to any Scotlabank soon and get yourself one — so convenient — you'll wonder how you ever got along without it!

Insurance Policy Should Include Basement Tools and Grand Piano

couples, enrolled in the Y's nine-week Preparation for Marriage Course, learned a few hard facts about insurance Tuesday evening when insurance agent Gordon Dunaway gave them some guide-lines on how to make sure that their possessions were adequately covered in case of loss or damage.

One of these guide-lines was an accepted assessment which lists $1,500 as the insurable worth of an average room's contents. The speaker cautioned his audience about common mistake of writing off the need to insure basement property.

LAWN MOWERS, TOO

"Lots of people tell me that there is no need to insure the basements of their homes because there's nothing down there. They forget expensive items like lawn mowers, power tools and other equip-

Queried as to the amount a home-owner should carry, Mr. Dunaway cited the National Housing Act's figure which stands at $16 a square foot. "You should add eight dollars a square foot for basement

EARTHQUAKES

In reply to a question, Mr. Dunaway confirmed that there were policies available to cover earthquake damage. "From surveys taken in Japan, Honolulu and California it has been proven that frame construction is the best to resist tremors because it can move or twist. "However, it is wise to take earthquake insurance if your home has radiant heat or concrete construction that would be expensive to re-

Mr. Dunaway told his audience that there is no insurance available to cover flood or tidal water damage.

LIABILITY POLICY

The speaker emphasized the importance of parents taking out liability policies. "I did this when my children were small and I think it was worth every penny. You never know when your youngster is going to cause damage. He can run into old folks on a trike and cause an accident. There are so many possibilities of getting into a position where bills can cripple you if you're not covered.'

Mr. Dunaway ended by stating that very few people carry adequate insurance, and that policy buyers should give their agent all the information possible so that he has a full picture of their needs.

Next Tuesday the group will study masculine and feminine decision-making and other related items.

BRIDGE LESSON By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY Newspaper Enterprise Assn. We wouldn't be inclined to criticise a pair that failed to reach six spades with today's North-South cards. North has only seven high card points and South 21 so that there are 12 points held by East and West. On the other hand, North has a six-card spade suit and a singleton and should have interest in a slam. Then while South has ▲J3 ♥93 ◆K8762 only 21 points he has two of the three top honor

spades and except for

N orth's three-heart bid is the spade transfer. All it guarantees possession of at least five spades so South merely rebids to three spades as his partner has requested. At this point North shows slam interest by bidding four clubs. With a spade bust North would simply pass at three spades, with a weak hand North would sing off at four spades, with this holding he merely bids another suit to suggest a slam.

South looks over his 21 points and they appear to be golden. He decides to do something about the slam. A control player might bid a Blackwood four no-trump and barge right into six, but an expert South would be far more delicate. This South merely bids four diamonds to tell his partner that he, too, has slam interest. North looks over his hand and decides that he does not have enough to warrant going past game so he signs off at four spades but South is not going to be denied. He CARL ANDRIESSEN might even barge right into six but South merely bids five spades.

Young children can easily be interested in growing plants if sufficient enthusiasm is shown first by the parents. As a beginning, try something which is fast in action, and is edible. These two attributes appeal to most youngsters, and they may discover that learning can be fun.

An important side effect may well be the lesson that some plants are eaten as food, while others definiand always, are by dangerous to eat adults as well as youngsters.

ASK ANDY

Andy will answer questions mitted by child readers and those submit the questions he select answer will receive worthwhile pu The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second ques-tion a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to David Mack, age 11, of Phoenix, Arizona, for his question:

How do they measure electricity?

We can measure a treasure chest by its height and its width, its length and its weight. But a treasure chest is made of solid matter. Liquids and gases are measured by the space or volume they occupy. They too are made of matter. Electricity is not made of matter. It is a form of energy and energy calls for a different system of neasurements.

The energy of electricity is itself invisible, but we can see and feel what it does. It can be triggered to light a lamp or warm a toaster. So we can measure it in terms of the work it does. We know how to create it. So we can measure it in terms of the forces required to generate so much electrical energy. We know that wires and other substances resist electrical current. This resistance is also a unit of electrical measurement. And we also can measure the strength of the urrent in an electric circuit.
Units for measuring elec tricity are very different from those used to measure the size and weight dimensions of matter. The basic unit is voltage — the electromotive voltage — the electromotive force that generates the current through a wire circuit. A force of 230,000 volts may be used to generate electricity through a circuit from Niagara Falls to New York City. You home may wired for voltage of 110 or

They say that a man who once wore uniform never forgets the number his country tacked to his name. A couple of evenings past, a friend in reminiscent mood yanked his from the mists of memory with no trouble at all.

Perhaps if I'd been in longer, mine would stick better. But the army rid itself of me while the fuzz was still on my battle-dress.

However, I do recall that to the end of my few months of service, h û n t eo-style whenever I could get away with it, and tended to salute with my left hand. There are other memories—tinged slightly with the guilt that comes from missing what so many young men of my generation endured—and I wouldn't trade them for anything.

Marching to bagpipes, for instance. Even the most confirmed stumble-foot can't help keeping time to the pipes. Twilight after hours of sweating up and down the rounded drybelt hills, and the day's last clear and lonely bugle-call shivering along the spine.

The food also comes to mind. In the camps that received me, it was uninspired. The army apparent had a corner on little white beans, and I swear if the holy grail were set before one of the cooks who fed us. he would reach automatically for the stewed tomato ladle.

We were rookies, and uppity, but the sergeants and corporals worked on us. They were firm but they were patient; they did their best to work green civilians into troops, and they never despaired of even the least promising material.

vorried me more. In the course of hut horseplay, some rat stomped my sheathed bayonet. I tried to pound blade and scabbard straight. Then, three men on success to free the reluctant steel. For three weeks, I lived in terror that the order would come to draw the blasted thing. Finally a platoon-mate on his way out of the army traded with me.

With logging-camp bunkhouses in my past, the lack of privacy didn't disturb me. More daunting to the spirit was the loneliness known by the man newly in uniform when he goes among civilians.

We marched, we learned, we drilled. Even though still unproved, we began to feel like soldiers. It startled me to realize how thoroughly homogenized we had become. I was healthy as a horse;

Eventually, our papers turned up under the butt of little civilian stenographer, who might better have used a couple of phone books provide the elevation she lacked.

Separation was swift. I surrendered my gear quartermaster's stores, took my final breaths of the army's soft-coal smoke, and returned to civilian life.

Planning will begin "immediatetly" said Garth Homer, managing director of the CWC, with all city agencies which offer assistance to victims of fire participating.

"We are going to try and co-ordinate a service for people who have been burned out of their homes. The idea is to give them the kind of help they need when they need it," he said. "It will be a matter of more effectively deploying what resources we have now," he said. Emergency housing is a top priority consideration. Until a family is re-situated permanently, the emergency bureau will provide a temporary home, bedding and clothing.

The service will be financed through the agency budget said Mr. Homer. Because disasters of this kind occur "only three or four times a year," no special budget will be needed, he said.

Q. Why does a home visit from a Victorian Order Nurse cost a patient money when there from a public health nurse in other areas?—R.J.

A. In some areas, like Saanich, public health nurses are paid by the government and the official agency is supported with tax money. The VON on the other hand is not government-supported. Their money comes from United Appeal and they must make up the rest by charging patients. However they do not refuse service to someone who is unable to pay. The fee they charge is based on cost to the VON of a visit. Part of this is paid through the B.C. medicomes from the patient. The VON is the only visiting nurse service in Victoria.

CHEMICAL SALESMEN

BETZ LABORATORIES, a leader in industrial water treatment and pollution control, has several openings in our West Canadian district for experienced Chemical Salesmen. Responsibilities will involve the sale of a complete line of water treatment chemicals for boiler, pulp and paper, cooling water application and follow-up technical service.

Individuals selected for these positions must have a proven record of accomplishment in chemical sales to industry. A chemical engineering or chemistry degree, while desirable, is not mandatory.

These positions offer an unusually attractive compensation plan, company car and comprehensive program of fringe benefits. Interested candidates are invited to write outlining details of education, experience and salary requirements to:

Mr. C. R. Piercy
